IOWA VOTERS GO TO POLLS TO NOMINATE KENYON SUCCESSOR

With Six Aspirants In
The Race It Is Likely
Convention Will Have
To Name Nominee.

BROOKHART BEST WRITES TO THOMAS

Des Moines, Ia., June 5.—A heavy early vote was reported throughout Iowa in the primary election today. The chief interest was in the contest for the Republican Senatorial nomination for the seat vacated by W. S. Kenyon.

Des Moines, June 5. (United Press).—Iowa voters go to the polls today to select candidates for the fall elections. In view of the progressive gains, the old-guard Republicans have been making particular efforts in Iowa to hold the regulars in line for administration policies.

There are now six candidates for the Republican senatorial nomination for the seat now filled by appointment by Charles A. Rawson, who took Senator Kenyon's place when the latter went on the federal bench. The are:

Representative Burton Sweet, former representative Charles E. Pickett, state senator Leslie Francis, Claude Stanley, Clifford Thorne, former Iowa railroad commissioner and Smith Brookhart, who two years ago was a candidate against Senator Cummins.

Sweet is being touted by his friends as the "administration candidate." Pickett and Francis are in the race according to progressive leaders merely to help along the plan of old guard chiefs.

Brookhart is an advanced progressive. He and Thorne were political friends.

Brookhart entered the race first. Thorne got in a few weeks ago, resigning as counsel for a farmer's organization to make the race. Under Iowa law, a candidate must receive 35 per cent of the vote cast to be legally nominated. With five candidates in the field it is obviously difficult for any one to get a large proportion of the vote unless he has a strong organization.

If no candidate gets the 35 per cent, the choice of a nominee is to be made by a state convention. That is what the old guard hope for. By keeping all six in the race, and having Thorne divide Brookhart's support among progressives, they expect to throw the senatorship into convention, where their choice can more easily be selected.

FIVE YEAR OLD HAS THRILLING ESCAPE UNDER AUTOMOBILE

"Billy," the five year old son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Starkey, of Reed street, had a very narrow escape from serious injury when struck and knocked down by an automobile driven by Lester Shull last evening. The accident occurred about 9 o'clock on Reed street in front of the Starkey home. Mr. Shull was driving up Third street and had just turned into Reed when little Billy ran right out in front of the car.

He was squarely in front of the car when struck and as he fell to the street the car passed over him. The wheels did not touch the prostrate lad, who came out of the affair suffering from minor bruises and today is but little the worse for his experience but he sure was a scared kid.

The driver of the car was entirely blameless in the matter.

SUPREME COURT DECISION ABSOLVES MINE WORKERS PAYING ANY DAMAGES

Washington, D. C., June 5.—Striking coal miners won a tremendous victory today when the Supreme Court held that the United Mine Workers need not pay damages amounting to more than $600,000 to Arkansas coal mine owners as the result of strike riots in Arkansas fields in 1914.

HARDING ENDORSES MOVE FOR GREATER PENN STATE COLLEGE

Expresses Surprise That
State Institution Can't
Admit Every Student
With Qualifications.

'KNOWS THE GAME'

State College, June 5.—President Harding, in a letter given out here today by President John M. Thomas of the Pennsylvania State College, expressed his surprise at the necessity of turning away 1000 students a year from that institution because of the lack of adequate facilities. He emphasized the value of land grant colleges in the public education system and wished success to those who are "undertaking to persuade the people of Pennsylvania to follow the example of every state west of them and to provide a State University worthy of the Commonwealth. President Harding's letter follows:

"My dear President Thomas: The land grant colleges founded by Act of Congress, signed by President Lincoln, and substantially assisted by annual grants of the Federal Government have become an important element in the public education of the nation.

"My attention has been called to your endeavor to develop the Pennsylvania State College, the land college of the Keystone State into a State University worthy of that great commonwealth.

"This has been done already in twenty-six other states, including my own State of Ohio. No state which has established a state university as part of its system of public schools would think of abandoning it.

"I wish you all success in your undertaking to persuade the people of Pennsylvania to follow the example of every state west of them and to provide a free institution of higher learning ample to meet the needs of the commonwealth.

"I have learned with surprise that it is necessary for one of our national colleges to refuse a thousand qualified students each year because of lack of facilities and I trust that your efforts to remedy this situation both by private gifts and public support may meet with success.

Very truly yours,
WARREN G. HARDING

The inadequacy of the plant and equipment at State College to meet all demands and the plan to develop the college into a state university came to the attention of President Harding when Dr. Thomas, representatives of the Washington Alumni Club of Penn State, and members of the student varsity quartet, called at the White House on April 24 last. This followed a meeting of the Alumni and the Pennsylvania Society in the Capital.

Dr. Thomas presented the four student musicians as representing 3,200 other students now enrolled at the college and told the President that had it not been necessary to turn away about an equal number of students in the past four years, the present enrollment would be about 6,000.

The plan for further development of Pennsylvania State College to which President Harding refers contemplates the raising of a fund of $2,000,000 for the erection of health and welfare buildings upon the campus. The buildings for which there is immediate need are physical education buildings for men and for women, a Varsity Hall, a Penn Hall, a Penn State Union, a hospital, and residences for men and for women.

COACH CRANE GIVEN HANDSOME LOVING CUP BY ATHLETES

Wonderful Demonstration
By Students Shows
They Appreciate Hard
Work of Brawn Maker.

'KNOWS THE GAME'

Coach H. T. Crane, who has so efficiently handled the Clearfield High school athletics during the past season was given an agreeable surprise Wednesday morning during the chapel exercises when Frank Withero, in behalf of the letter men of C. H. S. appeared on the stage and with well chosen words eulogized Coach Crane's untiring efforts. At the conclusion of Withero's remarks Cecil Torrence presented Mr. Crane with a handsome loving cup as a testimonial of the high esteem in which he is held by the Red & Black athletes.

Mr. Crane was taken wholly unawares and was visibly affected by the manifestation of good feeling and appreciation so handsomely and substantially demonstrated by the boys with whom he has been associated during the past season.

Mr. Crane responded in a very able manner and with much pathos reviewed the trials, tribulations and pleasures of his past season's relations with the athletes of C. H. S. Coach Crane Banquets

C. H. Letter Men at Jordans As a manifestation of his appreciation for the honor bestowed on him by the C. H. S. letter men, Coach Crane banqueted the boys at Jordans on Saturday night.

After the bounteous repast had been devoured by the sturdy athletes, Mr. Crane acted as toastmaster and each one present responded to the call for remarks, and all were unanimous in expressing their regret that Mr. Crane is contemplating making a change in his location next season and hoped that he would return to Clearfield where he is held in such high esteem.

Had An Up Hill Pull

When Coach Crane took up his duties as head foot ball tutor last fall, many serious problems confronted him. Mr. Crane was a "new man" in this section, having graduated at the Indiana State School of Physical Education and did not know what he was up against in the east. Facing a schedule that stated the strongest teams in Central Penna. and with only two men back from former Varsity teams to build a machine around which included developing an entirely new back field, it is obvious that Mr. Crane's foot ball grind was no "rest cure."

A like situation presented itself when the Basket Ball squad was called out for practice. Capt. Martin was the only man from Clearfield High's Championship team still attending school, while the other teams in the league had practically their veteran teams intact. Despite this handicap Coach Crane developed a team that not only finished in the first division, but was in the running for the league championship until faculty ruling barred the two varsity guards from a game that proved to be of crucial import to C. H. S.'s percentage in the won and lost column, as the local team with a shifted line up lost this game and the lead—and possibly the league championship.

Mr. Crane by his work in Clearfield the past year demonstrated that he "knows the game" from every angle. Aside from his ability to coach he possesses the happy faculty of being able to secure the absolute confidence of his boys which is the first principle of ability to tutor. He has the groundwork laid for some real achievements in athletics at Clearfield High which another year here should allow him to develop most satisfactorily, if it were possible to secure his services once more.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Rolley, of Stronach, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Harry O. Reed at present.

BOGGS TOWNSHIP SCHOOLS MAKING GOOD HEADWAY UNDER NEW PLANS

The Board of Directors of Boggs Township employed a supervising principal and 9 other experienced teachers to conduct the 10 schools of the district for the term of 1922-1923.

The 7 one room country school houses were repaired and one of them was rented to another district this district to receive tuition for the limited number of Boggs township pupils going there.

The school rooms were made comfortable and convenient by the addition of new desks as needed; new furnaces were put in three houses, windows, doors, maps and desks were repaired, toilets were looked after and kept in repair; the walls of the school rooms were kalsomined in white and buff shades supplied, so that the insufficiency of light caused by too little window space was at least in part overcome.

The interior of the 4 room building at Blue Ball including chemical toilets was repaired, a secretary's desk was put in the office and desks for pupils repaired and new ones supplied as needed.

The heating system was gone over and put in good shape and windows made convenient for ventilation. Book and supplies sufficient for all pupils were economically furnished, only enough new books being purchased to supply deficiencies in the beginning and as they occurred throughout the term.

Much better attendance of pupils than ever before was secured by careful enforcement of the attendance laws. The cost of keeping schools open with full attendance is found to be little more than with half or two thirds of the pupils present, besides the waste of educational facilities on empty benches.

This money waste in the fourth class district of Pennsylvania for the year ending with July 1921 was found to have been 5 1-4 millions of dollars. No doubt as the years go by and the attendance laws are kept properly enforced more and more of the citizens of the district will come to see the advantages to their children of being kept in school steadily and perfect attendance can be secured with that co-operation of parents and school officers which will do away with most of the friction and expense.

The financial affairs of the district have been put in such shape that the Board may readily know where they are at, and arrange a budget of receipts and expenditures as provided for by law.

Teachers' meetings were held on different Friday afternoons, the last one held at Blue Ball being a teachers, parents and directors meeting at which, besides all the teachers of the district and some from outside, the County Superintendent and his Assistant and a goodly number of citizens, including one director, were present.

The teachers of the second and third grades at Blue Ball conducted a very acceptable health exercise by some of their pupils and the first grade teacher gave most satisfactory demonstration of the teaching of reading to 10 of her little pupils.

There is undoubtedly yet room for improvement in the educational work in Boggs, but the foundation has been laid. The country child is as good as the town child and his or her future should not be jeopardized by lack of opportunity to go to a good school.

The future educational prospects of the district depend much upon the forward vision of Directors and citizens and the hearty co-operation of all in the effort to give the children the best possible opportunity for education.

RANKS OF STRIKERS HOLDING FIRM AS PRODUCTION GROWS

Washington, D. C., June 5.—The ranks of the striking coal miners are holding firm as, the mine tie-up enters its tenth week, the United States Geological Survey of the Department of the Interior officially reported today. No great change in the number of men on strike has yet occurred, the statement said. Approximately 450,000 men quit work on April 1st. Production is increasing slowly in the Connellsville region and more rapidly in the Kentucky and Tennessee fields.

OFFICIAL COUNT GIVES

Hark! From the Past a Pleasant Gurgling "Best Cellar" Gives Up Fifty-Year Secret

Talk about wealth—as wealth is measured in these arid Andy Volsstead days. Just listen to this true story of the "best cellar" in town. One day last week while rummaging in the far corner of the cellar at one of the very oldest residences in town a fortunate old-time Clearfielder ran across an old-fashioned five gallon wicker covered demijohn of the vintage of 1860. The ancient old jug was dirt encrusted and cobwebbed but the finder inquisitively proceeded to investigate his find. Seizing the hoary old vessel the explorer noted that it was not only quite heavy but that it gurgled most invitingly when it was disturbed. The longer he pursued the "investigation" the more interesting it became until the climax was reached when with glass in hand he tilted the jug at a slight angle and a stream of pleasant-boqueted wine colored fluid rushed forth. Though a deacon in the church, he was unable to restrain his curiosity until he touched the beverage to his lips, and then allowed a small portion of the contents of the glass to slowly slide down his throat, warming and radiating good cheer as it gratifyingly trickled down.

An ancient tag was attached to the neck of the old demijohn and it contained the name of a wholesale liquor dealer in Philadelphia during and before the Civil War days, and now that the secret is out we know our venerable friend will not object to our telling that the old "Jimmie John" contained approximately five gallons of whiskey, double copper distilled, the kind our daddies and granddaddies used to transport over the mountains in the days before the advent of the railroad, when everybody kept "a little in the house" in case of sickness.

This is really and truly a fact. That jug of liquor had been sitting quietly in the dark corner of that cellar all these years and to relieve our deacon friend of any suspicion in the matter we will say, as he tells it himself, the jug was addressed to his father, who has been dead these forty years, and the liquor it contained was more than fifty years old. We never tasted any that old but bet it would be real medicine "How dry I am; nobody knows."

Takes Poison Thinking It Was Powdered Sugar And Is Sent To Hospital

Viola, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Shade of Eighth Street, East End, is a patient at the Clearfield Hospital seriously ill from mercury poisoning, the result of an accidental happening on Decoration Day. While working about the cupboard in the Shade home, a box containing a white powder was knocked down off an upper shelf and a quantity spilled out of the box. Believing the stuff to be powdered sugar the young lady wet her finger, dipped same into the powder and placed it in her mouth to taste it.

When she picked up the lid of the box from where it had fallen on the floor Miss Shade saw it contained a poison label.

She became ill at once and being alone in the house at the time, called in Mrs. C. E. Carlson, a neighbor and told her what she had done.

Mrs. Carlson saw that the box contained potato bug poisoning, the chief ingredient of which was corrosive sublimate. She immediately administered white of egg and milk to counteract the effects of the poison. Dr. Rowles was telephoned for and upon his arrival administered further to the poisoned girl. She remained in a serious condition ever since and last evening was removed to the Clearfield Hospital for treatment. Report from the hospital today is that the young lady is now improving and that her recovery is looked for.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION AFTER BIG STEEL MERGER

Washington, D. C., June 5.—The Federal Trade Commission today struck at the big Bethlehem-Lackawanna steel merger, charging that the merger will violate anti-trust laws and contain a dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition. The Commission issued a formal complaint against the two companies. As to the proposed Midvale-Inland-Republic merger the Commission stated this probable combination would be thoroughly investigated. This merger has not yet reached the point where it can be charged that it violates anti-trust laws.

Pinchot, Pepper And Reed Conference Ends In Friendly Difference

Washington, D. C., June 5.—An effort to unite all factions of the Pennsylvania G. O. P. on a candidate for Chairman of the State Republican Committee ended here in what the conferees described as a friendly disagreement. Gifford Pinchot, nominee for Governor, representing the progressive wing of the party, Senator George Wharton Pepper and Major A. Reed, nominee to succeed Senator Knox, held a long conference in an effort to decide on a man to conduct the campaign.

Mrs. H. A. Breth and son Earl, of DuBois are the guests of her daughter, Mrs. A. M. Brund of Eighth Street, this week.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT SAT. EVENING ON WOODLAND STREET

Woodland, Pa., June 5, 1922.—Russel Strayer, 15 years old, adopted brother of Rev. J. F. Strayer, pastor of the Woodland U. B. Church, while riding his bicycle Saturday, was run down by an auto and seriously injured.

The car, driven by Mr. H. B. Powell, Pres. of the County National Bank of Clearfield, was traveling east and the boy on the bicycle was going west and the boy, probably thinking the car would continue in that direction, ran his bicycle directly in front of the car as Mr. Powell left the main road taking the road to the left to go out to the Pleasant Valley Fruit Orchard.

Mr. Powell in trying to avoid the boy on the bicycle ran his car into the corner of the Vulcan Trading Co. store Building, but the boy was knocked down and one of the rear wheels of the car passing over his shoulder and chest horribly crushing him.

He was hurriedly removed to the office of Dr. Shively who administered first aid and then he was taken to the Clearfield hospital and reports are that while his injuries are very painful and serious are not necessarily fatal.

The accident was naturally a very sad one and Mr. Powell feels very badly about it.

This is a dangerous place on the road and should be approached by cars under control as it is almost impossible to see cars coming from either direction for any great distance. The road at this point is narrow, necessitating each car hugging the side of the road.

At this same point two cars hooked about one o'clock in the afternoon.

Makers of "Canned Music" Suffer "from Horn Shyness"

Werrenrath, Famous Phonograph Artist, Reveals Secrets of the Wax

This is to explain why you may sometimes have been surprised to find that certain popular singers never make phonograph records. They don't because they can't and they can't because they haven't phonograph voices.

A phonograph voice is one that will record well, but what makes it do this is as much a mystery now as it was in the early days of cylinder graphophones, when all poor records were regarded as the result of mechanical errors.

The "Perfect Recorder"

Reinald Werrenrath, baritone, whose records sell in greater numbers than those of any living singer except John McCormack, is regarded in the great laboratory where his tests are made as an almost perfect "recorder," but even he shakes his head when you ask him how it's done, though he's been recording since he started his musical career as a choir boy.

"What goes into the horn, comes out," he explains, "and every suggestion of forcing, every slight off-shade pitch, all stringency or tightness, as well as falssetto or other cheating process shows up in the wax.

"You must sing naturally, though sometimes as I must, a little more softly or with less breath, than for the stage.

"When I made 'Tell Me Daisy,' the Schubert-Romberg song from 'Blossom Time,' however, I stood right in front of the horn without needing to move from side to side. But these things depend upon the individual voice.

Caruso's Voice Powerful

"The voice of Enrico Caruso was so enormous in volume that he was always forced to stand at least six feet away from the horn and sometimes when taking a high or loud tone, he had to go back as much as twenty feet to avoid blasting the wax.

"Another interesting and inexplicable fact is that it is sometimes possible for a soprano and a baritone to use the same horn while two tenors or two baritones may find it necessary to use entirely different instruments.

"Still another quirk in the recording game is the 'horn-shyness' which always overcomes the beginner, no matter how experienced he may be in facing vast audiences. Perhaps this unaccountable fear of a metal horn is really his knowledge that what goes into it, as I said, will always come out, and without any ameliorating circumstances, either."

HOW TO KEEP YOUR BABY WELL

Baby's Bath

Cleanliness plays a most important part in the health of a child and the small amount of work and time needed are worth the trouble.

The baby may be given a full tub bath when he is ten days old, provided the cord has come off. Baby should be bathed quickly as it is weakening to keep him in the water too long. Castile or some plain white soap should be used sparingly, and baby should never be soaped before he is put into the water.

It is a good plan to see that every thing is ready before starting. A clean soft wash cloth, or cheese cloth, soap, a small pin cushion for safety pins, a soft towel, a tub of warm water, and a cup of boiled water with an extra piece of clean soft cloth to wipe out the nose and eyes are needed. It is a good idea to have a thermometer and to have the water at a temperature of about 98°. If you have no thermometer, test the water with your own elbow. Be sure to have plenty of water.

Put the child into the water, supporting its back with your left hand, having your fingers well spread out. Apply the soap with a piece of soft cheese cloth or flannel. Be sure to get the water over the baby's back and head.

Powder may be used sparingly but only after the skin is perfectly dry. It should be applied between the thighs and under the arms and rubbed over the surface with the hand until only a very thin layer remains. For too much powder closes up the pores.

Of course, a child should be washed in a warm room, but it is a great mistake to do this close to a fire. A baby's skin is tender and as sensitive to heat as to cold.

In summer, baby requires more bathing than in winter. Sponging baby off with a wet cloth is a means toward comfort on a warm day.

If the baby is premature or very delicate the daily bath may be omitted in eczema and many other forms of skin diseases, it is often harmful to use soap in the water. Never bath the baby within an hour after feeding.

Many mothers like to have a table on which to change dress, and bathe the baby. It does away with much lifting, lessens the strain on the mother, and gives her freer use of both hands. This table may be whatever height best suits the mother. One model is about 30 inches from the floor. A common kitchen table with the legs sawed off to the desired height will answer every purpose.

If the table top is made of white maple or oak with very tight cracks it can be scrubbed with hot water and soap as often as needed. If soft wood or an old table is used it would be better to cover the top with oil cloth. Of course the baby is always put down on a soft pad, whatever the table top is made of. The mother may either stand or sit at this table when using it.

WILL WOMEN CREATE NEW DIPLOMACY?

Anyway This Modern International Doctor Would Put Up At- tractive Doses.

When Dorothy Terriss, American girl, one lucky day fished the words of "Three O'clock in the Morning" right out of the suds as she washed the supper dishes, she never expected it to rank her among international diplomats.

But just the same, a few weeks later, a statesman attending an important international conference labelled the little song, for which Julian Kohleda, Englishman, wrote the melody, "a link in international friendship forging."

"International songs would be a woman's way of practicing diplomacy every time," Miss Terriss declares. "English young people singing American popular songs and American young people dancing to English music can't help making for British-American friendship, now can it?"

"And while we're about it, wouldn't it be interesting if The Hague conference would get up some nice German tunes with French lyrics or Russian words to Japanese music, just by way of providing for the general understanding and promoting the common peace?"

"Springtime," a fantasy of mirth and music, will be given under the auspices of the Junior Women's Club, about June 22nd or 23rd, at the Driggs Theatre here, according to an announcement made today. The production will be staged under the personal direction of a professional producer.

The leading musical and dramatic talent in Clearfield is to appear in the various roles and in the dances and choruses.

"Springtime" is a musical production of merit. The libretto, music, costumes, scenic equipment, etc., are the property of John B. Rogers Producing Company; and the show will be produced by a representative of that concern. The scenic equipment for the production is far more elaborate than that usually supplied for the ordinary amateur affair, and for splendor closely approaches the metropolitan offerings.

The committee is headed by Helen O'Brien. Rehearsals are expected to begin about June 6th.

"Harmony Jazz" for Jaded Ear Drums

Comedian Jolson Predicts Pleasant New Music Fad

A "harmony jazz" that won't split your ear drums though played on your nearest neighbor's phonograph at midnight—that's what Harry Jolson, brother of the well-known Al, also a black-face comedian, predicts as the next step in popular music.

Harry and Al have always had friendly family arguments about music. Al rather likes the happy, noisy type, and Harry leans toward the song with a croon and swing that comes from way down south.

"Aw, I don't mean highbrow stuff," he explains carefully. "But, honest, I don't think negro melodies ever were intended to be shouted to the accompaniment of wild cawings or cowbells and kettledrums.

"You take 'Swanee River Moon,' a song I'm singing now. It might have been a chant of the swamper cotton fields, so soft and sympathetic is the v. decurrent. It's not jazz at all—but a haunting, wistful melody, a direct follow-up of the songs that used to be part of the religious rites of native Africans.

"Incidentally, mark my prophecy, it's the next step and an upward one, too, in national popular music."

WE HELP YOU TO PLAN YOUR EVERYDAY MEALS

Planning meals gets to be monotonous if you've just the same things to plan with day after day but when you have such a green goods service as we offer you it simplifies matters very much.

You will find that we are always showing the latest products from the South and that they are coming through in as fine a shape as they possibly can. We have connections with some of the largest produce markets in the country and they keep us posted on the markets all the time—they know when things first appear and many times in advance of their appearance.

Drop into the store often and you'll always find something that will be good and fresh.

DRINK MORE SAFE MILK

And there's only one SAFE milk—that's pasteurized milk. The process through which the milk is put makes it as germ-free as any milk can possibly be and the nutriment is retained.

The baby will thrive on it, the growing girl or boy will get stronger, the grown-up will take on more health, and the person along in years will find it a food worth considering,—but be sure that it's pasteurized.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Trout fishermen who have been whipping the streams in this section of Clearfield county are a unit in the belief that the State Fish Commission will have to adopt strenuous measures by next season, at least, if trout fishing is to remain upon the list of sports to be enjoyed in the mountains of Pennsylvania. But very little "stocking" of our streams has been indulged in the past few years, while the army of fishermen has been on the increase yearly. A "dunderheaded" legislature removed the size limit for trout three years ago and this dropping of the bars for two years worked havoc with the trout. Feeder or nursery streams were invaded and fished out, every trout big enough to bite being hauled out and carried off by greedy fishermen. That law was changed by the last legislature and the 8-inch size limit was again restored, but the damage was done, and the streams have since shown the destruction wrought.

This year the new fisherman's license law went into effect and the honest, sport-loving fishermen took out his license and contributed his dollar to the fund designed for the propagation of trout and protection of the trout streams. But many other "cheaters" failed to come across. Next year it is hoped and expected a license tag, similar to the hunter's license tag will be designed and all fishermen be required to wear same prominently displayed when on the streams. Then, too, the age limit should be reduced from 21 to 16 years. There are as many boys under 21 fishing as there are fishermen over that age, and these youths not only get as many trout but would be just as willing to pay their dollar into the fish propagation fund as are their elders, and it must be so if we are going to be able to raise fish enough to properly and scientifically restock our streams.

More wardens are needed on the streams to properly look after the "fish hogs" who infest the runs and pay no attention to law, decency or any thing else. There are more of these birds than one imagines at that. Also more repressive measures should be taken against the natural enemies of the trout. The water snake is very destructive and experienced fishermen say destroy more fish each summer than does any other single agency. A water snake, when the water is low, will descend into a hole in a run and in a few minutes time capture and destroy every trout in it.

These are but a few of the obstacles to trout culture up our way and are all comparatively easy of remedy.

Another vital thing that should be done is a shortening of the season, to say, three months. Ninety days ought to be enough for any fisherman and it is entirely too many for our present supply of trout and trout fishermen. The season at present opens on April 15th and lasts until August 1st. The last month should be knocked off entirely as ordinarily the water is too shallow and fall easy prey to low during July, and every agency, including man, given to preying upon the fast disappearing trout, appears to be taking advantage of that condition. The trout at this time huddle into the deepest pools, which are all their enemies.

Brother Trout Fishermen, if you have not already done so, give the

HOT WEATHER DISHES.

During the hot weather when all work seems a burden and play so inviting, is the time to rest on a shady porch or pick a basket for a day by the lake or river, if the ocean is too far away.

The housewife who plans to do much of the everyday things out of doors will not miss so much the pleasures of out of doors. Even a shady back door step may be comfortable to shell peas, pare potatoes, stem berries and even prepare desserts. Being out of doors makes the work mostly play.

The desserts which may be prepared the night before or in the early morning will be ready, with no hurry at the time they are needed.

If the family enjoys pie—and what family does not—the pastry may be prepared enough for two pies and a lemon or custard crust at one time. Take a cupful of lard, a half cupful of boiling water and a teaspoonful of salt, stir until dissolved, then add three cupfuls of sifted flour. When well mixed put into the ice chest to chill. This may be done in a very few minutes at night and the pastry will be ready in the morning. Line the pie tin, rolling the crust into them, as this kind of pastry seems to shrink more than the ordinary kind. Pastry made this way is usually repeated again and again, for it is always uniform and very tender and flaky.

Line a pie plate with a deep-fluted crust and fill with a pint of milk, a third of a cupful or less of sugar, three well-beaten eggs, a half teaspoonful of nutmeg and put the pie into a hot oven at first to bake the crust quickly on the bottom, then reduce the heat and cook slowly until the custard is set; you will have a good custard pie. Don't forget a pinch of salt, which is usually needed in all pies.

The various jellies and gelatins are good for hot weather and they have the advantage of keeping well for a day or two.

"Gold! Gold!"

Back in the 40's it took months for the thrilling news of California's gold strike to cross the continent. Today, a few hours after so important a discovery, the entire story would be known to newspaper readers throughout the country.

In the early days, news spread by word of mouth. Today, the telegraph and telephone speed the message into the newspaper office, it is rushed into type, the paper is printed and shortly the news becomes public property.

There are two kinds of news in the paper. One consists of the affairs of other people; their sayings, doings and what they're going to do; things that have happened, may happen and didn't happen.

The other kind of news is about your affairs. That's the part you'll find in the advertisements. There's a lot of valuable news there about things you want or will want; things that have to do with your own personal comfort, convenience and every-day efficiency.

Every advertisement carries a personal message to some one. Many advertisements carry messages of vital interest or value to you.

That's why you can't afford to miss the advertisements.

READ THEM. THE ADVERTISEMENTS ARE DECIDEDLY VALUABLE TO YOU.

Some Clearfield County property owners appear to object to Clearfield County being hauled out of the mud by the improved road route and are only going to allow it to be done cheaply or reasonably when compelled to do so by the court's mandate, and pennyroyal or otherwise barren lands, where it would hurry one to even raise an umbrella, have jumped in price one thousand per cent from the time an improved road is surveyed through such aforesaid or even a little better grade land.

The County of Clearfield is responsible for all damages incident to change of grade or relocation of state or county roads, and as the road between Curwensville, Grampian and the Ream's Watering Trough traverses an entirely new route for a major portion of the distance, the County Commissioners are finding some mighty valuable real estate along the right of way, and this find should result in much healthier valuations for taxing purposes hereafter.

As an illustration, representatives of the county went over the line the other day in order to feel out the property owners through whose land the new state road passes on the matter of damages. Every fellow was feeling mighty blue about something or other, judging by the results.

One fellow who recently offered his entire holdings, improvements and all, for $4,000, now only wants $3,000 for right-of-way through his woods for the road. A second fellow asks $2,000, another $600, while another one demonstrated that he was no piker by placing the damage to his farm at $18,000. Further along the route a property owner who recently paid $150 for a piece of ground through which the road passes, now asks $125 for right-of-way for the road across one corner, and so she goes.

In each and everyone of these cases, the building of the road through the properties touched is a decided advantage and instead of receiving damages the property owner ought to be assessed his pro rate share of the added value to his property by the passing of the road through his farm.

In every case of such unreasonable demand viewers will be appointed by the court to assess the proper modicum of damages, if any, and that's what will be paid. Meanwhile, the Commissioners ought to be well fortified for an increase in tax values along that particular route.

The rise of all Liberty Bond issues to par or higher several days ago is highly important, as proof that the country, economically speaking, is rapidly nearing that state of industrial and business normalcy for which everyone has been hoping. As beacons on the shores of the financial seas these securities are safe guides. The general improvement in business that has taken place is indicated by their steady rise in the market from the considerable discount at which they were traded in only several months ago. The history of former government bond issues is sound basis for the belief that all of these securities will ere long be selling at substantial premiums. All of which means that the purchasing power of the dollar is becoming greater than for several years past.

It was said in the darker days that the war bonds were absolutely safe investments, as to principal and interest both. Truth never was more absolute. Current quotations speak convincingly. Every coupon has been cashed when due. There will be 100 cents paid by the treasury for every dollar's worth of bonds at their maturity. But in the interval between issue and redemption these bonds, like every other salable thing, take their chance with the market that is made according to the laws of supply and demand.

Those who felt compelled to sell Liberties in an unfavorable setson, unfavorable because "everybody else" also wanted to sell and the dollar was exchangeable for less of consumable goods than it is normally, lose money on them. Those who keep their bonds may make a profit with the reversal of conditions. But all are certain to come out "whole" if they retain their trust.

I told him how I was afraid it was going to be just like Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. (I forgot to say I've read it now. I found it in Father's library.) Of course not just like it, only one of me was going to be bad, and one good. I was afraid, if I didn't look out, I told him how Marie always wanted to kick up rugs and move the chairs out of their sockets in the carpet, and leave books around handy, and such things. And so today it seemed as if I'd just got to take a vacation from Marie's hot gingham dresses and clumsy shoes. And I told him how lonesome I was without anybody, not even him. I told about Charlie Smith and Paul Mayhew and Mr. Chadee Livingstone, and how Aunt Jane wouldn't let me have them, either, even if I was standing where the book and driver meet.

Father gave another funny little grunt and got up and walked across the room. I thought at first he was angry, but he wasn't. He was even more gentle when he came back and sat down again, and he seemed interested, very much interested in everything I told him. But I stopped just in time from saying again how I wished I could go back to Boston; but I'm not sure but he knew I was going to say it.

But he was very nice and kind and told me not to worry about the music—that he didn't mind it at all. He'd been in several times and heard it. And I thought almost, by the way he spoke, that he'd come in on purpose to hear it; but I guess that was a mistake. He just put it that way so I wouldn't worry over it—about his bothering him, I mean.

He was going to say more, maybe; but I don't know. I had to run. I heard Aunt Jane's voice on the piazza saying good-by to the lady that had brought her home; so, of course, I had to run and hang Marie in the closet and get out Mary from the corner before she saw me. And I did.

By dinner-time I had on the gingham dress and the hot clumsy shoes again; and I had washed my face in cold water so I had got most of the tear spots off. I didn't want Aunt Jane to see them and ask questions, of course. And I guess she didn't. Anyway, she didn't say anything.

Father didn't say anything, either, but he acted queer. Aunt Jane tried to tell him something about the missionary meeting and the heathen, and a great famine that was raging. At first he didn't say anything; then he said, oh, yes, to be sure, how very interesting, and he was glad, very glad. And Aunt Jane was so disgusted, and accused him of being even more absent-minded than usual, which was entirely unnecessary, she said.

But even that didn't move Father a mite. He just said, yes, very likely; and went on scowling to himself and stirring his coffee after he'd drunk it all up—I mean, stirring where it had been in the cup.

I didn't know but after supper he'd speak to me and ask me to come to the library. I hoped he would. There were lots more things I'd like to have said to him. But he didn't. He never said a word. He just kept scowling, and getting up from the table and went off by himself. But he didn't go out to the observatory, as he most usually does. He went into the library and shut the door.

He was there when the telephone message came at eight o'clock. And what do you think? He'd forgotten he was going to speak before the College Astronomy club that evening! Forgotten his old stars for once. I don't know why. I did think, for a minute, 'twas 'cause of me—what I'd told him. But I knew, of course, right away that it couldn't be that. He'd never forgot his stars for me! Probably he was just reading up about some other stars, or had forgotten how late it was, or something. (Father's always forgetting things.) But, anyway, when Aunt Jane called him he got his hat and hurried off without so much as one word to me, who was standing near, or to Aunt Jane, who was following him all through the hall, and telling him in her most im-amazed-at-you voice how shockingly absent-minded he was getting to be.

ONE WEEK LATER.

Father's been awfully queer this whole week through. I can't make him out at all. Sometimes I think he's glad I told him all those things in the parlor that day I dressed up in Marie's things, and sometimes I think he's sorry and wished I hadn't.

The very next morning he came down to breakfast with such a funny look on his face. He said good-morning to me three times, and all through breakfast he kept looking over at me with a kind of scowl that was not cross at all—just puzzled.

After breakfast he didn't go out to the observatory, not even into the library. He loitered around the dining room till Aunt Jane went out into the kitchen to give her orders to Susie; then he burst out, all of a sudden:

"Well, Mary, what shall we do to-day?" Just like that he said it, as if we'd been doing things together every day of our lives.

"Do-oo?" I asked; and I know I showed how surprised I was by the way I stammered and flushed up.

"Certainly, do," he answered, impatient and scowling. "What shall we do?"

"Why, Father, I—I don't know," I stammered again.

"Come, come, of course you know!" he cried. "You know what you want to do, don't you?"

I shook my head. I was so astonished I couldn't even think. And when you can't think you certainly can't talk.

"Nonsense, Mary," scowled Father. "Of course you know what you want to do! What are you in the habit of doing with your young friends—your Carrie and Charles, and all the rest?"

I guess I just stood and stared and didn't say anything; for after a minute he cried: "Well—well—well! I'm waiting."

"Why, we—we walk—and talk—and play games," I began; but right away he interrupted.

"Good! Very well, then, we'll walk. I'm not Carrie or Charles, but I believe I can walk and talk—perhaps even play games. Who knows? Come, get your hat."

And I got my hat, and we went. But what a funny, funny walk that was! He meant to make it a good one, I know he did. And he tried. He tried real hard. But he walked so fast I couldn't half keep up with him; then, when he saw how I was hurrying, he'd slow down, and I was happily, and then he'd look so sorry and sad!

I just can't understand my father at all.

Well—and that's the way it's been all the week. And that's why I say he's been so queer. One minute he'll be just as nice and folksy as you could ask anybody to be, and the very next he's looking right through you as if he didn't see you at all, and you wonder and wonder what's the matter, and if you've done anything to displease him.

Sometimes he seems almost glad and happy, and then he'll look so sorry and sad!

He Didn't Say Much at First.

and look so worried—till he'd forget and go striding off again, 'way ahead of me.

We went up on the hill through the Benton woods, and it was perfectly lovely up there. He didn't say much at first. Then, all of a sudden, he began to talk about anything and everything. And I knew, by the way he did it, that he'd just happened to think he'd got to talk.

And how he talked! He asked me was I warmly clad (and here it is August!), and did I have a good breakfast, and how old was I, and did I enjoy my studies—which shows how little he was really thinking what he was saying. He knows school closed again.

Wasn't he teaching me himself the last of it, too? All around us were flowers and birds, and oh, so many, many lovely things. But he never said a word about them. He just talked—because he'd got to talk. I knew it, and it made me laugh inside, though all the while it made me sort of want to cry, too. Funny, wasn't it?

After a time he didn't talk any more, but just walked on and on; and by and by we came home.

Of course, it wasn't awfully jolly—that walk wasn't; and I guess Father didn't think it was either. Anyhow, he hasn't asked me to go again this week, and he looked tired and worried and sort of discouraged when he got back from that one.

But he's asked me to do other things. The next day after the walk he asked me to play to him. Yes, he asked me to; and he went into the parlor and sat down on one of the chairs and listened while I played three pieces. Of course, I didn't play loud ones, nor very fast ones, and I was so scared I'm afraid I didn't play them very well. But he was very polite and said, "Thank you, Mary," and, "That was very nice"; then he stood up and said, "Thank you" again and went away into the library, very polite but still, like company.

The next evening he took me out to the observatory to see the stars. That was lovely. Honestly I had a perfectly beautiful time, and I think Father did, too. He wasn't stiff and polite one bit. Oh, I don't mean that he was impolite or rude. It's just that he wasn't stiff as if I was company. And he was so happy with his stars and his telescope, and so glad to show them to me—oh, I had a beautiful time, and I told him so; and he looked real pleased. But Aunt Jane came for me before I'd had half enough, and I had to go to bed.

The next morning I thought he'd be different somehow, because we'd had such a lovely time together the night before. But he wasn't. He just said, "Good morning, Mary," and began to read his paper. And he read his paper all through breakfast without saying another word to me. Then he got up and went into the library, and I never saw him again all day except at dinner-time and supper-time, and then he didn't talk to me.

But after supper he took me out again to see the stars, and he was just as nice and friendly as could be. Not a bit like a man that's only a father by order of the court. But the next day—

LEGION WORKER IN CONGRESS

Hamilton Fish, Jr., One of Writers of Preamble to Constitution, Seeks Increase in Compensation.

The preamble to the constitution of the American Legion has been called one of the simplest, most effective and beautiful documents in the English language.

Three men wrote it in St. Louis, Mo., in 1919 and it never has been, nor probably never will be, changed. The men were John Green, way of Arizona.

Judge Davis of Oregon and Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York.

Mr. Fish is now in congress helping to put into effect the policies recited by the preamble he helped write. He has a bill pending to increase the compensation from $20 to $50 for the uncles of blind, legless, armless and totally disabled ex-soldiers. He is an ardent advocate of reclamation of land through irrigation, to encourage service men to take up farming as a vocation.

At Harvard he was captain of the varsity football team. In France he led a company of negro soldiers in the Fifteenth New York Infantry and received the Croix de Guerre for bravery.

Pending.

Georgian, Spending Day In Philadelphia, Learns Of His Arrest

Philadelphia, Pa., June 5.—John Lewis Philips, Georgia Republican State Chairman for whom a warrant has been issued from Washington, charging cooperation to defraud the Government through war contracts, stated at the home of relatives here today that he will return to Washington at once and demand a hearing. "I know absolutely nothing of this," said Philips, when shown the Washington despatch, "and until I do learn something there is nothing I can say. My goodness, I most certainly never have been a fugitive. I simply left Washington to spend Sunday with my family. There will be ample opportunity to serve any warrant on me before night."

IOWA VOTERS GO TO POLLS TO NOMINATE KENYON SUCCESSOR

With Six Aspirants In
The Race It Is Likely
Convention Will Have
To Name Nominee.

BROOKHART BEST WRITES TO THOMAS

Des Moines, Ia., June 5.—A heavy early vote was reported throughout Iowa in the primary election today. The chief interest was in the contest for the Republican Senatorial nomination for the seat vacated by W. S. Kenyon.

Des Moines, June 5. (United Press).—Iowa voters go to the polls today to select candidates for the fall elections. In view of the progressive gains, the old-guard Republicans have been making particular efforts in Iowa to hold the regulars in line for administration policies.

There are now six candidates for the Republican senatorial nomination for the seat now filled by appointment by Charles A. Rawson, who took Senator Kenyon's place when the latter went on the federal bench. The are:

Representative Burton Sweet, former representative Charles E. Pickett, state senator Leslie Francis, Claude Stanley, Clifford Thorne, former Iowa railroad commissioner and Smith Brookhart, who two years ago was a candidate against Senator Cummins.

Sweet is being touted by his friends as the "administration candidate." Pickett and Francis are in the race according to progressive leaders merely to help along the plan of old guard chiefs.

Brookhart is an advanced progressive. He and Thorne were political friends.

Brookhart entered the race first. Thorne got in a few weeks ago, resigning as counsel for a farmer's organization to make the race. Under Iowa law, a candidate must receive 35 per cent of the vote cast to be legally nominated. With five candidates in the field it is obviously difficult for any one to get a large proportion of the vote unless he has a strong organization.

If no candidate gets the 35 per cent, the choice of a nominee is to be made by a state convention. That is what the old guard hope for. By keeping all six in the race, and having Thorne divide Brookhart's support among progressives, they expect to throw the senatorship into convention, where their choice can more easily be selected.

FIVE YEAR OLD HAS THRILLING ESCAPE UNDER AUTOMOBILE

"Billy," the five year old son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Starkey, of Reed street, had a very narrow escape from serious injury when struck and knocked down by an automobile driven by Lester Shull last evening. The accident occurred about 9 o'clock on Reed street in front of the Starkey home. Mr. Shull was driving up Third street and had just turned into Reed when little Billy ran right out in front of the car.

He was squarely in front of the car when struck and as he fell to the street the car passed over him. The wheels did not touch the prostrate lad, who came out of the affair suffering from minor bruises and today is but little the worse for his experience but he sure was a scared kid.

The driver of the car was entirely blameless in the matter.

HARDING ENDORSES MOVE FOR GREATER PENN STATE COLLEGE

Expresses Surprise That
State Institution Can't
Admit Every Student

'KNOWS THE GAME'

State College, June 5.—President Harding, in a letter given out here today by President John M. Thomas of the Pennsylvania State College, expressed his surprise at the necessity of turning away 1000 students a year from that institution because of the lack of adequate facilities. He emphasized the value of land grant colleges in the public education system and wished success to those who are "undertaking to persuade the people of Pennsylvania to follow the example of every state west of them and to provide a State University worthy of the Commonwealth. President Harding's letter follows:

"My dear President Thomas: The land grant colleges founded by Act of Congress, signed by President Lincoln, and substantially assisted by annual grants of the Federal Government have become an important element in the public education of the nation.

"My attention has been called to your endeavor to develop the Pennsylvania State College, the land college of the Keystone State into a State University worthy of that great commonwealth.

"This has been done already in twenty-six other states, including my own State of Ohio. No state which has established a state university as part of its system of public schools would think of abandoning it.

"I wish you all success in your undertaking to persuade the people of Pennsylvania to follow the example of every state west of them and to provide a free institution of higher learning ample to meet the needs of the commonwealth.

"I have learned with surprise that it is necessary for one of our national colleges to refuse a thousand qualified students each year because of lack of facilities and I trust that your efforts to remedy this situation both by private gifts and public support may meet with success.

Very truly yours,
WARREN G. HARDING

The inadequacy of the plant and equipment at State College to meet all demands and the plan to develop the college into a state university came to the attention of President Harding when Dr. Thomas, representatives of the Washington Alumni Club of Penn State, and members of the student varsity quartet, called at the White House on April 24 last. This followed a meeting of the Alumni and the Pennsylvania Society in the Capital.

Dr. Thomas presented the four student musicians as representing 3,200 other students now enrolled at the college and told the President that had it not been necessary to turn away about an equal number of students in the past four years, the present enrollment would be about 6,000.

The plan for further development of Pennsylvania State College to which President Harding refers contemplates the raising of a fund of $2,000,000 for the erection of health and welfare buildings upon the campus. The buildings for which there is immediate need are physical education buildings for men and for women, a Varsity Hall, a Penn Hall, a Penn State Union, a hospital, and residences for men and for women.

COACH CRANE GIVEN HANDSOME LOVING CUP BY ATHLETES

Wonderful Demonstration
By Students Shows
They Appreciate Hard
Work of Brawn Maker.

'KNOWS THE GAME'

Coach H. T. Crane, who has so efficiently handled the Clearfield High school athletics during the past season was given an agreeable surprise Wednesday morning during the chapel exercises when Frank Withero, in behalf of the letter men of C. H. S. appeared on the stage and with well chosen words eulogized Coach Crane's untiring efforts. At the conclusion of Withero's remarks Cecil Torrence presented Mr. Crane with a handsome loving cup as a testimonial of the high esteem in which he is held by the Red & Black athletes.

Mr. Crane was taken wholly unawares and was visibly affected by the manifestation of good feeling and appreciation so handsomely and substantially demonstrated by the boys with whom he has been associated during the past season.

Mr. Crane responded in a very able manner and with much pathos reviewed the trials, tribulations and pleasures of his past season's relations with the athletes of C. H. S. Coach Crane Banquets

C. H. Letter Men at Jordans As a manifestation of his appreciation for the honor bestowed on him by the C. H. S. letter men, Coach Crane banqueted the boys at Jordans on Saturday night.

After the bounteous repast had been devoured by the sturdy athletes, Mr. Crane acted as toastmaster and each one present responded to the call for remarks, and all were unanimous in expressing their regret that Mr. Crane is contemplating making a change in his location next season and hoped that he would return to Clearfield where he is held in such high esteem.

Had An Up Hill Pull

When Coach Crane took up his duties as head foot ball tutor last fall, many serious problems confronted him. Mr. Crane was a "new man" in this section, having graduated at the Indiana State School of Physical Education and did not know what he was up against in the east. Facing a schedule that stated the strongest teams in Central Penna. and with only two men back from former Varsity teams to build a machine around which included developing an entirely new back field, it is obvious that Mr. Crane's foot ball grind was no "rest cure."

A like situation presented itself when the Basket Ball squad was called out for practice. Capt. Martin was the only man from Clearfield High's Championship team still attending school, while the other teams in the league had practically their veteran teams intact. Despite this handicap Coach Crane developed a team that not only finished in the first division, but was in the running for the league championship until faculty ruling barred the two varsity guards from a game that proved to be of crucial import to C. H. S.'s percentage in the won and lost column, as the local team with a shifted line up lost this game and the lead—and possibly the league championship.

Mr. Crane by his work in Clearfield the past year demonstrated that he "knows the game" from every angle. Aside from his ability to coach he possesses the happy faculty of being able to secure the absolute confidence of his boys which is the first principle of ability to tutor. He has the groundwork laid for some real achievements in athletics at Clearfield High which another year here should allow him to develop most satisfactorily, if it were possible to secure his services once more.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Rolley, of Stronach, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Harry O. Reed at present.

BOGGS TOWNSHIP SCHOOLS MAKING GOOD HEADWAY UNDER NEW PLANS

The Board of Directors of Boggs Township employed a supervising principal and 9 other experienced teachers to conduct the 10 schools of the district for the term of 1922-1923.

The 7 one room country school houses were repaired and one of them was rented to another district this district to receive tuition for the limited number of Boggs township pupils going there.

The school rooms were made comfortable and convenient by the addition of new desks as needed; new furnaces were put in three houses, windows, doors, maps and desks were repaired, toilets were looked after and kept in repair; the walls of the school rooms were kalsomined in white and buff shades supplied, so that the insufficiency of light caused by too little window space was at least in part overcome.

The interior of the 4 room building at Blue Ball including chemical toilets was repaired, a secretary's desk was put in the office and desks for pupils repaired and new ones supplied as needed.

The heating system was gone over and put in good shape and windows made convenient for ventilation. Book and supplies sufficient for all pupils were economically furnished, only enough new books being purchased to supply deficiencies in the beginning and as they occurred throughout the term.

Much better attendance of pupils than ever before was secured by careful enforcement of the attendance laws. The cost of keeping schools open with full attendance is found to be little more than with half or two thirds of the pupils present, besides the waste of educational facilities on empty benches.

This money waste in the fourth class district of Pennsylvania for the year ending with July 1921 was found to have been 5 1-4 millions of dollars. No doubt as the years go by and the attendance laws are kept properly enforced more and more of the citizens of the district will come to see the advantages to their children of being kept in school steadily and perfect attendance can be secured with that co-operation of parents and school officers which will do away with most of the friction and expense.

The financial affairs of the district have been put in such shape that the Board may readily know where they are at, and arrange a budget of receipts and expenditures as provided for by law.

Teachers' meetings were held on different Friday afternoons, the last one held at Blue Ball being a teachers, parents and directors meeting at which, besides all the teachers of the district and some from outside, the County Superintendent and his Assistant and a goodly number of citizens, including one director, were present.

The teachers of the second and third grades at Blue Ball conducted a very acceptable health exercise by some of their pupils and the first grade teacher gave most satisfactory demonstration of the teaching of reading to 10 of her little pupils.

There is undoubtedly yet room for improvement in the educational work in Boggs, but the foundation has been laid. The country child is as good as the town child and his or her future should not be jeopardized by lack of opportunity to go to a good school.

The future educational prospects of the district depend much upon the forward vision of Directors and citizens and the hearty co-operation of all in the effort to give the children the best possible opportunity for education.

No great change in the number of men on strike has yet occurred, the statement said. Approximately 450,000 men quit work on April 1st. Production is increasing slowly in the Connellsville region and more rapidly in the Kentucky and Tennessee fields.

Hark! From the Past a Pleasant Gurgling "Best Cellar" Gives Up Fifty-Year Secret

Talk about wealth—as wealth is measured in these arid Andy Volsstead days. Just listen to this true story of the "best cellar" in town. One day last week while rummaging in the far corner of the cellar at one of the very oldest residences in town a fortunate old-time Clearfielder ran across an old-fashioned five gallon wicker covered demijohn of the vintage of 1860. The ancient old jug was dirt encrusted and cobwebbed but the finder inquisitively proceeded to investigate his find. Seizing the hoary old vessel the explorer noted that it was not only quite heavy but that it gurgled most invitingly when it was disturbed. The longer he pursued the "investigation" the more interesting it became until the climax was reached when with glass in hand he tilted the jug at a slight angle and a stream of pleasant-boqueted wine colored fluid rushed forth. Though a deacon in the church, he was unable to restrain his curiosity until he touched the beverage to his lips, and then allowed a small portion of the contents of the glass to slowly slide down his throat, warming and radiating good cheer as it gratifyingly trickled down.

An ancient tag was attached to the neck of the old demijohn and it contained the name of a wholesale liquor dealer in Philadelphia during and before the Civil War days, and now that the secret is out we know our venerable friend will not object to our telling that the old "Jimmie John" contained approximately five gallons of whiskey, double copper distilled, the kind our daddies and granddaddies used to transport over the mountains in the days before the advent of the railroad, when everybody kept "a little in the house" in case of sickness.

This is really and truly a fact. That jug of liquor had been sitting quietly in the dark corner of that cellar all these years and to relieve our deacon friend of any suspicion in the matter we will say, as he tells it himself, the jug was addressed to his father, who has been dead these forty years, and the liquor it contained was more than fifty years old. We never tasted any that old but bet it would be real medicine "How dry I am; nobody knows."

Takes Poison Thinking It Was Powdered Sugar And Is Sent To Hospital

Viola, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Shade of Eighth Street, East End, is a patient at the Clearfield Hospital seriously ill from mercury poisoning, the result of an accidental happening on Decoration Day. While working about the cupboard in the Shade home, a box containing a white powder was knocked down off an upper shelf and a quantity spilled out of the box. Believing the stuff to be powdered sugar the young lady wet her finger, dipped same into the powder and placed it in her mouth to taste it.

When she picked up the lid of the box from where it had fallen on the floor Miss Shade saw it contained a poison label.

She became ill at once and being alone in the house at the time, called in Mrs. C. E. Carlson, a neighbor and told her what she had done.

Mrs. Carlson saw that the box contained potato bug poisoning, the chief ingredient of which was corrosive sublimate. She immediately administered white of egg and milk to counteract the effects of the poison. Dr. Rowles was telephoned for and upon his arrival administered further to the poisoned girl. She remained in a serious condition ever since and last evening was removed to the Clearfield Hospital for treatment. Report from the hospital today is that the young lady is now improving and that her recovery is looked for.

Pinchot, Pepper And Reed Conference Ends In Friendly Difference

Washington, D. C., June 5.—An effort to unite all factions of the Pennsylvania G. O. P. on a candidate for Chairman of the State Republican Committee ended here in what the conferees described as a friendly disagreement. Gifford Pinchot, nominee for Governor, representing the progressive wing of the party, Senator George Wharton Pepper and Major A. Reed, nominee to succeed Senator Knox, held a long conference in an effort to decide on a man to conduct the campaign.

Mrs. H. A. Breth and son Earl, of DuBois are the guests of her daughter, Mrs. A. M. Brund of Eighth Street, this week.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT SAT. EVENING ON WOODLAND STREET

Woodland, Pa., June 5, 1922.—Russel Strayer, 15 years old, adopted brother of Rev. J. F. Strayer, pastor of the Woodland U. B. Church, while riding his bicycle Saturday, was run down by an auto and seriously injured.

The car, driven by Mr. H. B. Powell, Pres. of the County National Bank of Clearfield, was traveling east and the boy on the bicycle was going west and the boy, probably thinking the car would continue in that direction, ran his bicycle directly in front of the car as Mr. Powell left the main road taking the road to the left to go out to the Pleasant Valley Fruit Orchard.

Mr. Powell in trying to avoid the boy on the bicycle ran his car into the corner of the Vulcan Trading Co. store Building, but the boy was knocked down and one of the rear wheels of the car passing over his shoulder and chest horribly crushing him.

He was hurriedly removed to the office of Dr. Shively who administered first aid and then he was taken to the Clearfield hospital and reports are that while his injuries are very painful and serious are not necessarily fatal.

The accident was naturally a very sad one and Mr. Powell feels very badly about it.

This is a dangerous place on the road and should be approached by cars under control as it is almost impossible to see cars coming from either direction for any great distance. The road at this point is narrow, necessitating each car hugging the side of the road.

At this same point two cars hooked about one o'clock in the afternoon.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION AFTER BIG STEEL MERGER

Washington, D. C. June 5.—The Federal Trade Commission today struck at the big Bethlehem-Lackawanna steel merger, charging that the merger will violate anti-trust laws and contain a dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition. The Commission issued a formal complaint against the two companies. As to the proposed Midvale-Inland-Republic merger the Commission stated this probable combination would be thoroughly investigated. This merger has not yet reached the point where it can be charged that it violates anti-trust laws.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

Trout fishermen who have been whipping the streams in this section of Clearfield county are a unit in the belief that the State Fish Commission will have to adopt strenuous measures by next season, at least, if trout fishing is to remain upon the list of sports to be enjoyed in the mountains of Pennsylvania. But very little "stocking" of our streams has been indulged in the past few years, while the army of fishermen has been on the increase yearly. A "dunderheaded" legislature removed the size limit for trout three years ago and this dropping of the bars for two years worked havoc with the trout. Feeder or nursery streams were invaded and fished out, every trout big enough to bite being hauled out and carried off by greedy fishermen. That law was changed by the last legislature and the 8-inch size limit was again restored, but the damage was done, and the streams have since shown the destruction wrought.

This year the new fisherman's license law went into effect and the honest, sport-loving fishermen took out his license and contributed his dollar to the fund designed for the propagation of trout and protection of the trout streams. But many other "cheaters" failed to come across. Next year it is hoped and expected a license tag, similar to the hunter's license tag will be designed and all fishermen be required to wear same prominently displayed when on the streams. Then, too, the age limit should be reduced from 21 to 16 years. There are as many boys under 21 fishing as there are fishermen over that age, and these youths not only get as many trout but would be just as willing to pay their dollar into the fish propagation fund as are their elders, and it must be so if we are going to be able to raise fish enough to properly and scientifically restock our streams.

More wardens are needed on the streams to properly look after the "fish hogs" who infest the runs and pay no attention to law, decency or any thing else. There are more of these birds than one imagines at that. Also more repressive measures should be taken against the natural enemies of the trout. The water snake is very destructive and experienced fishermen say destroy more fish each summer than does any other single agency. A water snake, when the water is low, will descend into a hole in a run and in a few minutes time capture and destroy every trout in it.

These are but a few of the obstacles to trout culture up our way and are all comparatively easy of remedy.

Another vital thing that should be done is a shortening of the season, to say, three months. Ninety days ought to be enough for any fisherman and it is entirely too many for our present supply of trout and trout fishermen. The season at present opens on April 15th and lasts until August 1st. The last month should be knocked off entirely as ordinarily the water is too shallow and fall easy prey to low during July, and every agency, including man, given to preying upon the fast disappearing trout, appears to be taking advantage of that condition. The trout at this time huddle into the deepest pools, which are all their enemies.

Brother Trout Fishermen, if you have not already done so, give the

HOT WEATHER DISHES.

During the hot weather when all work seems a burden and play so inviting, is the time to rest on a shady porch or pick a basket for a day by the lake or river, if the ocean is too far away.

The housewife who plans to do much of the everyday things out of doors will not miss so much the pleasures of out of doors. Even a shady back door step may be comfortable to shell peas, pare potatoes, stem berries and even prepare desserts. Being out of doors makes the work mostly play.

The desserts which may be prepared the night before or in the early morning will be ready, with no hurry at the time they are needed.

If the family enjoys pie—and what family does not—the pastry may be prepared enough for two pies and a lemon or custard crust at one time. Take a cupful of lard, a half cupful of boiling water and a teaspoonful of salt, stir until dissolved, then add three cupfuls of sifted flour. When well mixed put into the ice chest to chill. This may be done in a very few minutes at night and the pastry will be ready in the morning. Line the pie tin, rolling the crust into them, as this kind of pastry seems to shrink more than the ordinary kind. Pastry made this way is usually repeated again and again, for it is always uniform and very tender and flaky.

Line a pie plate with a deep-fluted crust and fill with a pint of milk, a third of a cupful or less of sugar, three well-beaten eggs, a half teaspoonful of nutmeg and put the pie into a hot oven at first to bake the crust quickly on the bottom, then reduce the heat and cook slowly until the custard is set; you will have a good custard pie. Don't forget a pinch of salt, which is usually needed in all pies.

The various jellies and gelatins are good for hot weather and they have the advantage of keeping well for a day or two.

"Gold! Gold!"

Back in the 40's it took months for the thrilling news of California's gold strike to cross the continent. Today, a few hours after so important a discovery, the entire story would be known to newspaper readers throughout the country.

In the early days, news spread by word of mouth. Today, the telegraph and telephone speed the message into the newspaper office, it is rushed into type, the paper is printed and shortly the news becomes public property.

There are two kinds of news in the paper. One consists of the affairs of other people; their sayings, doings and what they're going to do; things that have happened, may happen and didn't happen.

The other kind of news is about your affairs. That's the part you'll find in the advertisements. There's a lot of valuable news there about things you want or will want; things that have to do with your own personal comfort, convenience and every-day efficiency.

Every advertisement carries a personal message to some one. Many advertisements carry messages of vital interest or value to you.

That's why you can't afford to miss the advertisements.

Entered in Post Office at Clearfield, Pa., as second class mail matter

Some Clearfield County property owners appear to object to Clearfield County being hauled out of the mud by the improved road route and are only going to allow it to be done cheaply or reasonably when compelled to do so by the court's mandate, and pennyroyal or otherwise barren lands, where it would hurry one to even raise an umbrella, have jumped in price one thousand per cent from the time an improved road is surveyed through such aforesaid or even a little better grade land.

The County of Clearfield is responsible for all damages incident to change of grade or relocation of state or county roads, and as the road between Curwensville, Grampian and the Ream's Watering Trough traverses an entirely new route for a major portion of the distance, the County Commissioners are finding some mighty valuable real estate along the right of way, and this find should result in much healthier valuations for taxing purposes hereafter.

As an illustration, representatives of the county went over the line the other day in order to feel out the property owners through whose land the new state road passes on the matter of damages. Every fellow was feeling mighty blue about something or other, judging by the results.

One fellow who recently offered his entire holdings, improvements and all, for $4,000, now only wants $3,000 for right-of-way through his woods for the road. A second fellow asks $2,000, another $600, while another one demonstrated that he was no piker by placing the damage to his farm at $18,000. Further along the route a property owner who recently paid $150 for a piece of ground through which the road passes, now asks $125 for right-of-way for the road across one corner, and so she goes.

In each and everyone of these cases, the building of the road through the properties touched is a decided advantage and instead of receiving damages the property owner ought to be assessed his pro rate share of the added value to his property by the passing of the road through his farm.

In every case of such unreasonable demand viewers will be appointed by the court to assess the proper modicum of damages, if any, and that's what will be paid. Meanwhile, the Commissioners ought to be well fortified for an increase in tax values along that particular route.

The rise of all Liberty Bond issues to par or higher several days ago is highly important, as proof that the country, economically speaking, is rapidly nearing that state of industrial and business normalcy for which everyone has been hoping. As beacons on the shores of the financial seas these securities are safe guides. The general improvement in business that has taken place is indicated by their steady rise in the market from the considerable discount at which they were traded in only several months ago. The history of former government bond issues is sound basis for the belief that all of these securities will ere long be selling at substantial premiums. All of which means that the purchasing power of the dollar is becoming greater than for several years past.

It was said in the darker days that the war bonds were absolutely safe investments, as to principal and interest both. Truth never was more absolute. Current quotations speak convincingly. Every coupon has been cashed when due. There will be 100 cents paid by the treasury for every dollar's worth of bonds at their maturity. But in the interval between issue and redemption these bonds, like every other salable thing, take their chance with the market that is made according to the laws of supply and demand.

Those who felt compelled to sell Liberties in an unfavorable setson, unfavorable because "everybody else" also wanted to sell and the dollar was exchangeable for less of consumable goods than it is normally, lose money on them. Those who keep their bonds may make a profit with the reversal of conditions. But all are certain to come out "whole" if they retain their trust.

MARY MARIE

By Eleanor H. Porter

Illustrations by
R. H. Livingstone

I told him how I was afraid it was going to be just like Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. (I forgot to say I've read it now. I found it in Father's library.) Of course not just like it, only one of me was going to be bad, and one good. I was afraid, if I didn't look out, I told him how Marie always wanted to kick up rugs and move the chairs out of their sockets in the carpet, and leave books around handy, and such things. And so today it seemed as if I'd just got to take a vacation from Marie's hot gingham dresses and clumsy shoes. And I told him how lonesome I was without anybody, not anybody, and I told about Charlie Smith and Paul Mayhew and Mr. Chadee Livingstone, and how Aunt Jane wouldn't let me have them, either, even if I was standing where the book and driver meet.

Father gave another funny little grunt and got up and walked across the room. I thought at first he was angry, but he wasn't. He was even more gentle when he came back and sat down again, and he seemed interested, very much interested in everything I told him. But I stopped just in time from saying again how I wished I could go back to Boston; but I'm not sure but he knew I was going to say it.

But he was very nice and kind and told me not to worry about the music—that he didn't mind it at all. He'd been in several times and heard it. And I thought almost, by the way he spoke, that he'd come in on purpose to hear it; but I guess that was a mistake. He just put it that way so I wouldn't worry over it—about his bothering him, I mean.

He was going to say more, maybe; but I don't know. I had to run. I heard Aunt Jane's voice on the piazza saying good-by to the lady that had brought her home; so, of course, I had to run and hang Marie in the closet and get out Mary from the corner before she saw me. And I did.

By dinner-time I had on the gingham dress and the hot clumsy shoes again; and I had washed my face in cold water so I had got most of the tear spots off. I didn't want Aunt Jane to see them and ask questions, of course. And I guess she didn't. Anyway, she didn't say anything.

Father didn't say anything, either, but he acted queer. Aunt Jane tried to tell him something about the missionary meeting and the heathen, and a great famine that was raging. At first he didn't say anything; then he said, oh, yes, to be sure, how very interesting, and he was glad, very glad. And Aunt Jane was so disgusted, and accused him of being even more absent-minded than usual, which was entirely unnecessary, she said.

But even that didn't move Father a mite. He just said, yes, very likely; and went on scowling to himself and stirring his coffee after he'd drunk it all up—I mean, stirring where it had been in the cup.

I didn't know but after supper he'd speak to me and ask me to come to the library. I hoped he would. There were lots more things I'd like to have said to him. But he didn't. He never said a word. He just kept scowling, and getting from the table and went off by himself. But he didn't go out to the observatory, as he most usually does. He went into the library and shut the door.

He was there when the telephone message came at eight o'clock. And what do you think? He'd forgotten he was going to speak before the College Astronomy club that evening! Forgotten his old stars for once. I don't know why. I did think, for a minute, 'twas 'cause of me—what I'd told him. But I knew, of course, right away that it couldn't be that. He'd never forgot his stars for me! Probably he was just reading up about some other stars, or had forgotten how late it was, or something. (Father's always forgetting things.) But, anyway, when Aunt Jane called him he got his hat and hurried off without so much as one word to me, who was standing near, or to Aunt Jane, who was following him all through the hall, and telling him in her most im-amazed-at-you voice how shockingly absent-minded he was getting to be.

ONE WEEK LATER.

Father's been awfully queer this whole week through. I can't make him out at all. Sometimes I think he's glad I told him all those things in the parlor that day I dressed up in Marie's things, and sometimes I think he's sorry and wished I hadn't.

The very next morning he came down to breakfast with such a funny look on his face. He said good-morning to me three times, and all through breakfast he kept looking over at me with a kind of scowl that was not cross at all—just puzzled.

After breakfast he didn't go out to the observatory, not even into the library. He loitered about the dining room till Aunt Jane went out into the kitchen to give her orders to Susie; then he burst out, all of a sudden:

"Well, Mary, what shall we do to-day?" Just like that he said it, as if we'd been doing things together every day of our lives.

"Do-??" I asked; and I know I showed how surprised I was by the way I stammered and flushed up.

"Certainly, do," he answered, impatient and scowling. "What shall we do?"

"Why, Father, I—I don't know," I stammered again.

"Come, come, of course you know!" he cried. "You know what you want to do, don't you?"

I shook my head. I was so astonished I couldn't even think. And when you can't think you certainly can't talk.

"Nonsense, Mary," scowled Father. "Of course you know what you want to do! What are you in the habit of doing with your young friends—your Carries and Charlies, and all the rest?"

I guess I just stood and stared and didn't say anything; for after a minute he cried: "Well—well—well! I'm waiting."

"Why, we—we walk—and talk—and play games," I began; but right away he interrupted.

"Good! Very well, then, we'll walk. I'm not Carrie or Charlie, but I believe I can walk and talk—perhaps even play games. Who knows? Come, get your hat."

And I got my hat, and we went.

But what a funny, funny walk that was! He meant to make it a good one, I know he did. And he tried. He tried real hard. But he walked so fast I couldn't half keep up with him; then, when he saw how I was hurrying, he'd slow down, and I was hurry, he'd slow down, and I was

by we came home.

Of course, it wasn't awfully jolly—that walk wasn't; and I guess Father didn't think it was either. Anyhow, he hasn't asked me to go again this week, and he looked tired and worried and sort of discouraged when he got back from that one.

But he's asked me to do other things. The next day after the walk he asked me to play to him. Yes, he asked me to; and he went into the parlor and sat down on one of the chairs and listened while I played three pieces. Of course, I didn't play loud ones, nor very fast ones, and I was so scared I'm afraid I didn't play them very well. But he was very polite and said, "Thank you, Mary," and, "That was very nice"; then he stood up and said, "Thank you" again and went away into the library, very polite but still, like company.

The next evening he took me out to the observatory to see the stars. That was lovely. Honestly I had a perfectly beautiful time, and I think Father did, too. He wasn't stiff and polite one bit. Oh, I don't mean that he was impolite or rude. It's just that he wasn't stiff as if I was company. And he was so happy with his stars and his telescope, and so glad to show them to me—oh, I had a beautiful time, and I told him so; and he looked real pleased. But Aunt Jane came for me before I'd had half enough, and I had to go to bed.

The next morning I thought he'd be different somehow, because we'd had such a lovely time together the night before. But he wasn't. He just said, "Good morning, Mary," and began to read his paper. And he read his paper all through breakfast without saying another word to me. Then he got up and went into the library, and I never saw him again all day except at dinner-time and supper-time, and then he didn't talk to me.

But after supper he took me out again to see the stars, and he was just as nice and friendly as could be. Not a bit like a man that's only a father by order of the court. But the next day—

Well—and that's the way it's been all the week. And that's why I say he's been so queer. One minute he'll be just as nice and folksy as you could ask anybody to be, and the very next he's looking right through you as if he didn't see you at all, and you wonder and wonder what's the matter, and if you've done anything to displease him.

Sometimes he seems almost glad and happy, and then he'll look so sorry and sad!

I just can't understand my father at all.

ANOTHER WEEK LATER.

I'm so excited I don't know what to do. The most wonderful thing has happened. I can't hardly believe it yet myself. Yet it's so. My trunk is all packed, and I'm to go home tomorrow. Tomorrow!

This is the way it happened: Mother wrote Aunt Jane and asked if I might not be allowed to come home for the opening of school in September. She said she understood quite well that she had no right to ask this, and, of course, if they saw fit, they were entirely within their rights to refuse to allow me to go until the allotted time. But that she could not help asking it for my sake, on account of the benefit to be derived from being there at the opening of the school year.

Of course, I didn't know Mother was going to write this. But she knew all about the school here, and how I came out, and everything. I've always told Mother everything that has happened. Oh, of course, I haven't written "every few minutes," as she asked me to. (That was a joke, anyway, of course.) But I have written every few days, and, as I said before, I told her everything.

Well, when the letter came I took it to Aunt Jane myself; and I was crazy to know what was in it, for I recognized the writing, of course. But Aunt Jane didn't tell me. She opened it, read it, kind of flushed up, and said, "Humph! The idea!" under her breath, and put the letter in her pocket.

Marie wanted to make a scene and insist on knowing what was in her own mother's letter; but Mary contented herself with looking superb and haughty and disdainful, and marching out of the room without giving Aunt Jane the satisfaction of even being asked what was in that letter.

But at the table that noon Aunt Jane read it to Father out loud. So that's how I came to know just what was in it. She started first to hand it over to him to read; but as he put out his hand to take it I guess he saw the handwriting, for he drew back quickly, looking red and queer.

"From Mrs. Anderson to you?" he asked. And when Aunt Jane nodded her head he sat still farther back in his chair and said, with a little wave of his hand, "I never care to read—other people's letters."

Hamilton Fish, Jr., One of Writers of Preamble to Constitution, Seeks Increase in Compensation.

The preamble to the constitution of the American Legion has been called one of the simplest, most effective and beautiful documents in the English language.

Three men wrote it in St. Louis, Mo., in 1919 and it never has been, nor probably never will be, changed. The men were John Green, way of Arizona.

Judge Davis of Oregon and Hamilton Fish, Jr. of New York.

Mr. Fish is now in congress helping to put into effect the policies recited by the preamble he helped write. He has a bill pending to increase the compensation from $20 to $50 for the uncles of blind, legless, armless and totally disabled ex-soldiers. He is an ardent advocate of reclamation of land through irrigation, to encourage service men to take up farming as a vocation.

At Harvard he was captain of the varsity football team. In France he led a company of negro soldiers in the Fifteenth New York Infantry and received the Croix de Guerre for bravery.

Pending.

"Well, want to marry my daughter, I suppose?" snapped the grouchy millionaire as he glowered at the timid youth. Adjusting his glasses he added: "By the way, aren't you one of my daughter's former suitors?"

"No-o-o sir," faltered the cheerless one, "but I expect I soon will be."—American Legion Weekly.
